

Usage Tracking is Anonymous

Thanks for taking the time to review how Radcal employs usage tracking to improve our products. Your contribution is critically important and will ensure that our software is continuously improved to better meet your needs.

What we don't collect

We don't collect any information that will be used to identify you as an individual. Radcal is committed to ensuring that usage tracking remains anonymous. We use your IP Address solely for the purpose of identifying in which country/state you are using the software. We do not track other personal information like your name, address, email address or phone number. We do not collect your comments or other meta-data that might be entered or stored when using the software. Radcal may collect identifying information, such as computer ID, in order to validate registration. However, usage tracking is anonymous; no identifying information (including Computer ID) will be associated with your usage information.

What we do collect

We collect information on how you use the software so that we can identify ways in which it can be improved to serve you better. For instance, which buttons and actions you employ when interacting with the software:

- Did you use the keyboard to connect?
- Do you change your device settings or use the defaults?
- Are you exporting data with headers or without?
- Are you saving measurement sessions?
- Basic system information such as your screen resolution, and operating system.

Also, we would like to know the frequency with which you perform different actions:

- How many measurements you take per session?
- Which measurement sensor combinations do you use most?
- How often do you connect using Wi-Fi? USB?
- What are your Accu-Gold preferences? i.e. your dose unit selection.

Thanks for taking an active part in improving our products -- Your friends at Radcal.
